THE JACKDAW AND THE PIGEONS

A Jackdaw watching some farm-yard Pigeons envied them their good food.

"I want some too," he decided. So, painting himself white, he joined them. The Pigeons did not know he was a Jackdaw, until he started chattering. Then they pecked him, and he flew back to the Jackdaws. But they were angry at his disguise, and they pecked him too.

Moral

Do not be greedy, or you may lose more than you gain.
