THE FABLES
OF PILPAY.

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR BALDWIN, CRADOCK, AND JOY; J. BOOKER;
LACKINGTON, HUGHES, HARDING, MAVOR, AND JONES;
LAW AND WHITTAKER; RODWELL AND MARTIN; AND
J. WALKER.

1818.
GENERAL HEADS.

Introduction ........................................... 1

CHAPTER I.
Fortune favours the Bold .............................. 7

CHAPTER II.
That we ought to avoid the Insinuations of Flatterers and Backbiters ........................................... 47

CHAPTER III.
That the Wicked come to an ill End .................. 163

CHAPTER IV.
How we ought to make Choice of Friends, and what Advantage may be reaped from their Conversation ........................................... 214

CHAPTER V.
That we ought always to distrust our Enemies, and, if possible, be perfectly informed of whatever passes among them ........... 245
CONTENTS

What gave Occasion to the writing of this Book, and by whom it was composed | 1

CHAPTER I.

The Story of Dabschelim and Pilpay | 7

FABLE I.

The travelling Pigeon | 19

FABLE II.

The Falcon and the Raven | 28

FABLE III.

The greedy and ambitious Cat | 31

FABLE IV.

The poor Man that became a King | 36

FABLE V.

The Leopard and the Lion | 41
CONTENTS.

FABLE X.  Page
The Monkeys and the Bears  . . . . .  295

FABLE XI.
The Mouse that was changed into a little Girl  . . . . . . . . .  305

FABLE XII.
The Serpent and the Frogs  . . . . .  309
The Conclusion  . . . . . . . . .  311